Quality of Service: Value: 0 of 0 people found this review helpful Published on: 2016-02-13 16:08:21 by bencze Easy to use and intuitive. In just a few clicks you can create a macro and then assign it to a keyboard shortcut to save a lot of time. I only wish it had an undo option, but this is an editor and it is understandable for it not to have. Q: Writing to an access database from python without prompting for the username and password I am trying to write a program where a user enters a username and password and can then write a certain amount of information to an access database. I am using pyodbc and python. For some reason when I enter the password, even if it's wrong, it asks me to enter the password again, rather than just saying access denied. The code I have so far is: import pyodbc import string from Tkinter import * from tkFileDialog import askopenfilename def main(): conn = pyod
